

Brief Clarifications, More Evidence

Clarifications, professional

Congruent with My official findings, I'd started to get at least two instances of personnel non-overtly identifying with manifest and varying str-level franchises apparently implying, effectively, 'You want I should wh'ck 'em, boss?' Distinctly not, nor do I find the manifest franchises themselves valid due to the nature of the basis they're on. Not that they likely would have regardless; per the manifest pattern it was just an implied 'offer' presented from a counter-Divine Will basis in an investment in yet another effort to gain My 'buy-in' to it. I made no reply, as it was beneath all involved, but I suppose there's a comparatively minor nudge from Duty to Divine Will to establish that plainly and overtly. For the record I want the same thing I've wanted for ages now: us all on a Divine Will and True Nature-aligned basis, and the awesome that'd result from that. It manifestly seems I don't get that, at least still not right now.

I've also been encountering a recently-manifest pattern of non-overt behavior from telep and prophecier-capable personnel, or those in communication with them, to present the organizing symbolism of My "House" in ways that could, perhaps, be interpreted as using symbolism like [past] and [future] to organize some non-overt 'spy versus spy' 'resistance' antics and then cite them as, 'Look what He did, everybody! He de-legitimatized Himself!' It manifestly wouldn't be the first time by any means, so My overtly quashing all that appears to be in order. We can find an example of it for instance in that 'Next Gen' ep, with the [war] in the [past] and a successful avoidance of it in the [future]. I'm refraining from all those sorts of antics, and as such overtly providing an alert to direct attention on it seems the more effective means of establishing that.

Incidentally all this appears to be part of a pattern about what the organizing symbolism of that "Twitter renaming itself" thing was manifestly intended to present as. As in, 'Let's see if we can get Him to Choose a counter-Divine Will basis to counter another counter-Divine Will basis, and then He and His Cause will be a non-issu.' Not only have I distinctly no intention of doing that, such implied efforts wouldn't even successfully justify the manifest liabilities which are continuing to compound by the moment. Twenty thousand human lives in Gaza just recently for example; no organization is 'worth' that much, particularly when it's not upholding Divine Will and True Nature.

Clarification, personal

I recently encountered what had been a technical 'oops' which appeared to be followed by what likely was a sincere misinterpretation of something as a personal or professional non-overt 'message' or 'signal' from Myself. I can appreciate why someone would legitimately make that inference. If you're someone who knows Me personally or professionally, have encountered something you've interpreted as a non-overt 'message' from Me in the last few days, something perhaps appearing to involve a relevant name, you're advised to disregard it. It was unintended as anything relevant. The method you seem to prefer for relying on non-overt 'messaging' there is fiddly at best and tends to give bogus positives. If something like that which appears quirky recurs, it would be advisable to literally wait to see if it's anything more than a figurative fluke. It almost certainly is. But I can appreciate why you'd make the inference and don't hold it against you. The counter-Divine Will, counter-True Nature basis though manifestly continues to remain a problem.

Evidence

Recently the city of Brooklyn went to do some excavation near Union Street to install some new or expanded irrigation. When it did so, it encountered an illegal tunnel which led into the womens' section of the self-described 'Chabad-Lubavitch World Headquarters'. Hours ago as of this writing, some young Zionists had pulled away the boards the city had placed there in order to fill it with cement or concrete, and then did a sit-in in an effort to prevent or protest the filling. These were publicly denounced by an official rabbi in partial English, but when Brooklyn PD were called to get it sorted there was quite the figurative scene. Cops attempted or succeeded to temporarily close the place, some arrests appear to have been made and as one admirably put it, 'We don't do that in America.' Just so.

They do however appear to do it in Palestine. Isn't that interesting? Particularly with regard to the 'Israeli Defense Force' apparently doing the tunneling which 'Israel' very conveniently blames on 'Hamas'. For those unfamiliar, the Lubavitchers are manifestly a sort of Zionist franchise 'End Times' cult, and have been publicly affiliated with Putin, Trump, Netanyahu and Zelensky. That's, er, an interesting blind, no? And they appear to be the overt, 'religious' front for the 'Israeli' Mossad. Non-overt kahoots since they're 'big' in the Zionist contingent. Figuratively, at least.

And as we can see they manifestly use the same methods. The incident in Brooklyn illustrates this, and corroborates the evidence that 'Israel', most likely via 'the Mossad', did the tunnels in Gaza which it's been politically expedient to blame on 'Hamas'. Currently the Brooklyn item has pretty much just been in ostensibly 'Jewish'-specific news reporting, but as evidence it's just rife with geopolitical significance.

Edit: Within hours the item was deleted by the pro-Zionist who'd originally shared it, once they noticed that the responses were unfavorable to their cause. It's started to make it into the Establishment media news though. I've replaced the 'deleted tweets' links with more laggy but somewhat reliable archived versions.

Some associations

As a bonus I'm going to present some patterns that've been showing up recently, perhaps relevant. For starters I've been encountering a trend or a trope in the media at which I've been looking, to the effect of 'You're symbolically [intoxicated]. You've bought into something which isn't actually so. You've got us all wrong, Satori.' It's been in the current news cycles, we saw it in that 'Next Gen' ep with 'stranger drunk', and we got a brief glimpse of it in the 'Romeo + Juliet' scene with the quietly annoyed and contemptuous 'Dude, you're messed up' look from the bouncer upon entrance to the party. Given the results of the overt headlines etc., I'd have to infer instead that what they're manifestly doing is wrong.

And I keep thinking back to that scene from 'The Game'. He's got a gun, she's calm about it until she notices that it's not one of the bogus ones they use and they'd missed it when they'd searched his house; this one's actually effective.

That's when she freaks. And from where did he get it? Stashed away inside a book. Metaphorically, what does or could this represent? And that's when My free-association senses 'clicked', flashing on the bits from 'Romeo + Juliet' in which lines about swords had instead been modernized into the supposed brand names of guns. Replace the metaphor of a gun in 'The Game' with a sword instead, retrieved from a book, and we'd appear to have something which comports with basic Christian symbolism and references the Bible. It's a bit of a tenuous 'read' of the media content I suppose, but it does at least seem accurate; for all the training they'd manifestly been doing with Me not only had they tended not to get into that, but the emphasis on literal magic and the occult in My teen years appears to've been strategically-designed to focus Me on, and interest Me in, something mutually-exclusive with it early on.

As I'd said, the correlation here could be nothing whatsoever but I'm presenting it as interesting regardless. Just stuff I've been thinking about recently, since they appear to have this Gregorian year down as a write-off too and their apparent efforts to get Me frantically throwing Myself at every option to counter all this stuff, even and in particular the illegitimate 'non-option' options.
